Technology is progressing incredibly fast and becoming widely pervasive that it is at times difficult for people to fathom. In this rapidly changing world, one thing that has not changed is people's desire to be healthy. Exercise is a vital component of any health regimen, and in Taiwan, the sporting and leisure goods are as a result essential elements of the health industry as well.

TBS Group, established in 1980, began the business with manufacturing billiard and its accessories. Under the leadership of the founding president Dr. George Wood, the company has been a leading force in Taiwan's sporting goods industries. Innovative designs define its range of products, which comprises of a variety of sporting and leisure goods, such as badminton, volleyball, table tennis, and fitness equipments.

TBS Group moreover specializes in high quality creations, and is a top-notch provider of premium merchandises and tailored services to countless buyers in Europe, Africa, the Middle East and the U.S. Its strength lies in integrated research and development operation, which help power the company to new heights in the international marketplace.

Besides being the current chairman of the Taiwan Sporting Goods Manufacturers Association (TSMA), and the Taiwan Sports Technology Association (TSTA), Dr. Wood has also been active in charity works since decades ago. His commitment includes establishing a scholarship fund for students from low-income families, as well as an aid organization to assist underprivileged families and senior citizens who live alone. Dr. Wood has truly set an excellent example for entrepreneurs to contribute to the society.

Approaching the 30th anniversary of the company, I am sure TBS Group will steadfastly continue to innovate and upgrade its product lines, and offer its customers with most suitable items to meet both their market and health needs. I wish them another wonderful 30 years to come.
